Scottish MPs are currently entitled to vote on matters affecting only England. However, in cases where those matters have been devolved to the Scottish Parliament English MPs cannot vote on matters that affect only Scotland. Do you think this is fair or unfair?

Government spending per head in Scotland is currently about 20% higher than in England, due to a formula agreed in the 1970s to address poverty in Scotland, yet Scots pay the same tax rates as people in England. Do you think this is fair or unfair?

Documents have been published under the Freedom of Information Act showing that the Treasury warned Gordon Brown in 1997 that the changes he made to taxes on shares in his first budget would wipe £75 billion from the value of pension funds. Gordon Brown has said the change was necessary to ensure a strong economy. Do you think Gordon Brown was right or wrong to tax pension funds this way?
