KEY CLASH

Benoît Cheyrou vs Steven Gerrard

As the less heralded younger brother of Bruno, a player whose name was usually preceded by the words "French flop" during his time at Anfield, Benoît Cheyrou is an unlikely potential star for Marseilles. Realistically, he has little or none of Gerrard's class, but he is a grafter in the Mathieu Flamini mould and will make more impression on the Liverpool midfield tonight than his brother, now at Rennes, did while on Merseyside

TWISTS AND TURNS

If Liverpool win they will advance to the knockout stage of the Champions League. Lose and they will go out

Complications arise should the teams draw. Marseilles won at Anfield, meaning they would edge the English side out, assuming that FC Porto beat or draw with Besiktas

If Liverpool draw and Besiktas win, the Reds would go through. It would leave Liverpool, Marseilles and Porto all with eight points but Rafael Benitez's side would go through with the best goal difference in the head-to-head matches between the three teams
