Squirrel crisps? Are you nuts?

Chloe Lambert

reports on six wild
crisp flavours that hit
the shops today — and it's up to you which one stays

In July, Young Times reported on a competition to find a new flavour of Walkers crisps for Britain. There were more than a million entries!
Today the six finalists will see their flavours go on sale and face the public vote. You can vote for your favourite flavour with a free text message to 51199 or go to walkers.co.uk. The most popular flavour will remain on sale from May.
So forget sad old salt and vinegar and routine ready salted. Take a look at these six weird and wonderful concoctions...

Crispy Duck & Hoisin

Here's an alternative to a Chinese takeaway: crisps that taste like crispy duck. They have a hint of hoisin sauce, too, so this sweet and sour mix could be a real quacker!

Onion Bhaji

Curry is Britain's most popular type of food, so perhaps onion bhaji will be the winning flavour. It's mildly spicy and might taste nice dipped in chutney or yoghurt.

Fish & Chips

It's a national dish and everyone loves it. But can you imagine munching on crisps that taste like fish? They even have a hint of vinegar, so maybe it'll be the catch of the day!

Builder's Breakfast

How can you squeeze egg, bacon, toast and tomato ketchup into one bite? This flavour is designed to be just like an English breakfast. It would certainly save on cooking, but it's hard to imagine your family sharing a bag of these on a Sunday morning, somehow.

Cajun Squirrel

If you've ever wondered what squirrel tastes like, now's your chance to find out. Squirrel often features on menus at trendy restaurants — and on cookery shows, too. But don't worry: no animals were harmed in the making of this crisp.

Chilli & Chocolate

The combination of spicy chilli and sweet chocolate may sound bizarre, but actually this is a popular mix and you can already buy bars of chocolate infused with chilli. Would it work as a crisp, though?

... and the ones that didn't make it

- Strawberries and cream
- Curried frog
- Fried scorpion poppers
- Birthday cake
- Jelly beans
- Cowpie
